

A Sense-less Poem

by Carey Blyton

I'm having trouble with my ears –
they do not see so well.

My eyes are also failing fast – they've lost their sense of smell.

My nose has lost its power of speech,
my tongue, its sense of touch;
alas, your sympathy's in vain –
my hands can't hear you much

